Let's connect!

A New Adventure

Thank you!

Kristie Denbrock

For the past 13 years I have been given extraordinary opportunities and memorable experiences in helping to build the MSFS program from the ground up.

It is with mixed emotions that I depart from our devoted MSU team and begin a new adventure with the National Environmental Health Association (NEHA) in Denver, Colorado. I wish to thank all of my colleagues and food safety students and alumni for the many years

Greetings!

With each New Year comes new possibilities, challenges and opportunities to make a difference. This month's update will introduce you to two alumni who are moving food safety forward for a better future.

We wish each of you a joyous and prosperous New Year!

PS: Don't forget to REGISTER for Creating a Food Safety Culture Executive Education, with Frank Yiannas, Bill Marler, and Mike Taylor, May 24 - 26, 2017. Seating is limited.

Making Your Bacon Better

Alumnus Dr. Scott Kramer improving herd health

Bacon lovers everywhere Dr. Scott Allen Kramer is your hero. A recent graduate of the Online Master of Science in Food Safety at MSU, Dr. Kramer is also a swine veterinarian at HyLife Ltd., La Broquerie, MB Canada.

Dr. Scott Kramer

In addition to his role as a swine veterinarian working to maintain and improve herd health and welfare, he is a validator for the Canadian Pork

Quality Assurance (CQA) program through which he assures consumers that the Canadian hog farmers, who are dedicated to the highest quality criteria, demonstrate their compliance with national standards for food safety and animal care. Furthermore, as a Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) accredited veterinarian, Dr. Kramer is responsible for assuring the health of pigs exported to the United States. Continue reading.
